

VALID – Calls to Action

VALID is asking the Federal Government to make some changes.
The Federal Government is the Government of Australia.

Call to Action 1:

Make a centre called the National Resource Centre.

This centre will be a place where people can learn about Supported Decision Making.

Call to Action 2:

Make training that professionals can get from the NDIS
Quality and Safeguards Commission.

This training will help professionals learn how to support people to make decisions.

Call to Action 3:

Make sure NDIA staff who work with people with disability do training on supported decision making.

Call to Action 4:

Get ideas and feedback about the Disability Royal Commission and NDIS Review from:

- People with intellectual disability
- Their families and supporters.

What VALID is asking the State Government to do

The State Government is the Government of Victoria.

1. Give money to groups and projects that support people to make their own decisions.

2. Give money to help families learn how to support their family member to make their own decisions.

3. Give money to help people with disabilities join self-advocacy and peer groups so they can:

- Speak up for themselves
- Support other people.

4. Get ideas and feedback about the Disability Royal Commission and NDIS Review from:

- People with intellectual disability
- Their families and supporters.
